

Certified Radiation Therapist:

Gulf Coast Veterinary Specialists has a state-of-the-art veterinary radiation oncology section equipped with a linear accelerator utilizing IMRT and a 3D dosimetry system linked to CT and MR. Our multi-specialty hospital is staffed by a group of dedicated veterinary specialists that include acupuncture, critical care, dermatology, diagnostic imaging, internal medicine, and oncology. The radiation oncology department currently has an exciting opportunity for a radiation therapist to fill a permanent, full-time position in our fast-paced, cutting edge veterinary radiation oncology practice. This position will be responsible for the administration of radiation therapy protocols for all types of veterinary small animal and exotics patients, equipment care and maintenance, performing CT simulations, and assistance in other areas of veterinary radiation oncology as time permits. We are looking for candidates that have excellent skills in the areas of communication, compassionate care, and organization. The candidate must have a strong interest for veterinary medicine, an avid initiative to learn, and strive to perform at their highest level possible. We are looking for someone who is willing to go the extra mile for our veterinary patients and clients by showing them compassion and respect as we utilize both definitive and palliative radiation therapy protocols.

Requirements:

Applicants must have graduated from an ARRT accredited program. We are looking for someone who is dependable, self motivated and can work well independently as well as in a team environment. Applicant must be able to multi task, prioritize, and handle high stress situations. It is preferable for applicants to have experience with animals but no veterinary industry experience is required, knowledge of veterinary anatomy is a plus. Applicants must be comfortable with all types of pets and highly interested in pursuing a career in the veterinary field. On the job training in veterinary technology will be provided.

We offer excellent benefits and competitive salaries (dependant on experience).
